Enterprise-wide tokenization solution protects sensitive data by leveraging format-preserving tokens.

Organizations have increasingly come to accept tokenization, the replacement of sensitive information with surrogate values called tokens, as a best practice to protect payment card data. As data breaches and their associated costs continue to grow, industry regulations are becoming increasingly stringent.

Increased pressure for organizations to protect sensitive data such as end user identifiers like Social Security numbers, HR data, financial data and drivers' license numbers is driving merchants to find a more flexible solution. Businesses need to extend their tokenization strategy to protect all types of Personally Identifiable Information (PII), but need to ensure tokens are adaptable to multiple data types, formats and lengths.

XiFlex™ powered by XiSecure® On-demand, Paymetric's format-preserving tokenization solution, gives organizations the adaptability needed to protect multiple types of sensitive information. XiFlex maintains the original length and format of the data so organizations can leverage Paymetric's tokenization technology to protect any type of sensitive information that resides within their enterprise. The original data is stored in Paymetric's off-site, highly secure data vault.

Now businesses can roll out a tokenization strategy for their entire organization with no impact to their existing IT infrastructure and no added costs for modifications.
